METEOROLOGICAL REPORT.

Yesterday's Record at the Local Office of the Weather Bureau.

Salt Lake City, Utah, March 1, 1899. Maximum temperature, 50 degrees; minimum, 34 degrees.

The following is the local forecast of the weather for today: Occasional rain; stationary temperature.

J. H. MURDOCH, Section Director, Weather Bureau.

FIRE AND POLICE MATTERS.

The fire and police bill, which passed both houses of the legislature, the senate unanimously and the house with but one opposing vote, is meeting with

Chief Pratt, who sees his life tenure of office imperiled; Mayor Clark, who entered office entangled with Pratt's

The bill, which passed both houses so unanimously, and which is probably in the hands of the governor by this time, leaves undisturbed the present

This is the only material difference between the bill which passed and the one originally presented.

Feature of the measure, to the section which fixes the time for reorganization after the term of the present mayor and council expires, that the chief of police and his backers are opposed.

Other objections are raised to the measure, but they are unimportant, because they are not warranted by the facts.

1. This city will be continued in its present unfortunate condition, with respect of further expensive litigation.

2. That the city will be left without a fire or police department at the beginning of next year.

3. That the original bill was entirely satisfactory.

The news is right when it says that the trouble and expense which have arisen under the present system are sufficient to condemn it, and there should be no unnecessary delay in putting an end to it.

That another contemporary, which has called the present legislature an aggregation of idiots, and has claimed that they lack the intelligence to make laws of any kind, and who have lately some excuse to shake their head at, is violently opposed to the fire and police measure occasions no surprise.

The fact that, in an assembly of sixty-three members, only one vote is recorded against it, insures the antagonism of that party, were there no other reason to attract the attention of travelers entering the valley.

It will be a triumph for Salt Lake City, regardless of party organizations, when the bill becomes a law.

PARTING: A SWEET PLEASURE.

Disapproving of The Herald's policy, Judge Orlando W. Powers has discontinued his subscription to this paper.

Once upon a time a Hoosier named Tom Groves became incensed with the policy of the New York Sun and addressed a bitter letter to Dana, telling him to stop sending his paper, and giving the reasons for his displeasure.

Mr. Dana printed the letter in the Sun's editorial columns, and added:

"Good-bye, Groves; don't stay away any longer than you can help."

POLITICS IN THE SCHOOLS.

The long threatened educational bill, the natural result of whose enactment into a law is to drag the city schools into the mire of partisan politics, has been at last prevented.

It is as long as the proverbial moral law and contains material enough to engage the attention of a committee for the next six weeks, but not quite enough to conceal its most objectionable feature.

The bill provides that school elections shall be held at the time of the general elections, and that education and parietism shall be thoroughly mixed henceforth in cities of the first and second class.

The evil which is bound to grow out of such a system cannot be overestimated. It will degrade the public schools, contaminate the pupils, divide the patrons and agitate the community as nothing else could. It can only result, as it did in San Francisco, in a total demoralization of the schools, and the farming out of positions to ward heeled and campaign contributors.

The bill provides, also, for the election of the city superintendent on the regular party tickets. He will naturally be selected by his popularity in view, more than his fitness for the place, and the main qualification, others not altogether ignored, of course, will be his ability as a vote-getter.

It would be just as well for the bill to go one step further and require the nomination of all teachers, to be voted on by the respective districts as city councilmen are elected in the several precincts.

The janitors may as well be included. It will make it all the merrier; and, eventually, perhaps, the law may be amended so that scholars are entitled to attend only after submitting their names in the campaign to be voted upon in the general election.

Then the partisan school system will be complete.

NEVER MIND THE CROAKERS.

Look over the country from sea to sea, scan every state from Maine to Washington, and from the Canadian lake to the border of Mexico, and there isn't a spot so promising, so inviting, so filled with attractions to outside capital as is the region round the Great Salt Lake.

To be sure, there are some who would frighten capital away and turn homeseekers aside, but their potency for evil is in a state of natural decline.

Every corner of the croaker-men who sit around and nurse sore heads and growl and grumble all the day; who think their neighbors are all pledge-breakers and law-breakers, who discredit the courts and predict evil for the future, who raise their heads and bellow every time they see an immigrant approaching. But as every community has had experience with croakers, their influence is waning and Utah may have a good year in spite of them.

As a sanitarian, not only on account of the excellent climate, but because of the numerous mineral springs and the wonderful dead sea, the section is destined to become famous all over the world.

As a field for profitable investment in the agricultural lands or irrigation enterprises, Utah holds out inducements that shine through the dust that the malcontents are kicking up.

Aside from its value as a sanitary point, aside from the indications of increased prosperity in almost every line of business, the cities of Utah are ideal homes. The people are moral, orderly, law-abiding and industrious as a rule. No one should take fright at the storm stories of the croakers.
